Target Audience

This activity is designed to meet the needs of practicing physicians, pathologists, and other specialists involved with anatomic pathology.

Statement of Gap/Educational Opportunity

The field of anatomic pathology is constantly changing, and many of the most important advances in the field are presented at clinical meetings and within clinically oriented journals and often missed by pathologists. In the setting of new technology, techniques and advancements in the field, practice gaps are inevitable. As such, pathologists require ongoing educational opportunities to stay current in order to maintain and improve their knowledge and competence in the field.

Educational Objectives

At the conclusion of this activity, all participants should be able to:

- Recognize the importance of a multidisciplinary approach to the histology of interstitial lung disease at arriving at a histopathological diagnosis
- Discuss the histopathology of interstitial lung diseases in a practical and simple manner
- Discuss advances within molecular testing of non-small cell carcinomas
- Summarize critical elements in a pathology report that enables the clinician to make treatment recommendations
- Discuss accurate diagnoses and classification of kidney tumors
- Describe morphologic features key to assisting in optimal patient management
- Recognize variant morphologies of the most common mesenchymal tumors of the uterus
- Discuss diagnostic criteria for the different subtypes of uterine leiomyosarcoma
- Recognize emerging entities within the endometrial stromal category of tumors
- Identify immunohistochemical profiles of the different subtypes of high-grade endometrial cancers
- Assess different subtypes of in situ and invasive carcinoma of cervix
- Recognize these tumors from benign and malignant mimics.
- Describe immunohistochemical profiles of different entities and caveats
